UM STUDENTS CAST IN PLAY ABOUT DROUGHT

MISSOULA --

Three University of Montana students have roles in the Montana Repertory Theatre's production of "The Rainmaker," an official Montana Centennial event.

They are: Casey Greenwood of Great Falls; Jim Lortz of Deer Lodge; and Ty Richardson or Kalispell.

Greenwood, who plays Jimmy Curry, is a senior in drama and had a part in the Rep's tour of "Cowboy" a year ago. Lortz and Richardson also were on tour with "Cowboy," a musical written by UM alum Dick Riddle about the life of cowboy artist Charles M. Russell.

For "The Rainmaker" UM graduate student Lortz plays Starbuck. Richardson, a senior in drama, plays Noah Curry.

After its performances in Missoula, the Rep will take the romantic comedy to 31 cities in eight states as an official Montana Centennial event.

The performances will be Feb. 1-4 and 8-11 in the Montana Theatre of the Performing Arts and Radio/Television Center on UM's campus. The play will also be performed Feb. 15 in Deer Lodge and March 24 in Big Fork.
